About the Conference

Inspired by the Renaissance — a period marked by artistic, intellectual, and cultural rebirth — this conference seeks to bring these principles into a modern context, focusing on women's health. It will explore the three key phases of a woman's life: reproduction, pregnancy, and aging.Renaissance means stimulating new researchers, as in the artisan's workshop, the great master cultivated his/her students, some of whom would later surpass him/her. Thus, putting aside the ego of the senior expert, we will have to favor the new generations and the new ways of "narrating" health, treatments and the use of technologies. We should be accompanied by Artificial Intelligence, by the need for simulation and by the advances in information technology.

The scientific programme of the Renaissance Conference on The Three Ages of the Woman is divided into three parts: Fertility, Maternal-Fetal Medicine, and Post-Reproductive Medicine, featuring a blend of the most seasoned experts in the field alongside speakers from the new generation.With this spirit we are re-proposing a new concept of conference that, from the etymology, does not only mean "gathering together" but, above all, "confronting and comparing".Meet with leading experts in reproduction, maternal-fetal, and post-reproductive medicine!

MAIN INFORMATIONS

Participants wishing to participate in the session entitled
"The (pelvic) floor is yours!" " are invited to submit an abstract describing the clinical case they intend to present. The abstract should include relevant anamnesis, diagnosis, treatment, and clinical outcome.

Please note that not only positive cases are welcome; even unfavorable cases are encouraged, as they offer valuable opportunities for discussion and learning.
Deadline November 1st, 2026

ABSTRACT SUBMISSION (DEADLINE November 1st 2026)

Those wishing to submit their work to the conference are invited to submit an abstract, which will then be evaluated by the scientific committee.

Submission Method: Only by email at: info@partnergraf.it
Template: Word format usually divided into: Introduction/Purpose, Methods, Results, Discussion/Conclusions.
Length: Respect the limits, 2,500 characters (including spaces) or approximately 300 words.
Content: Title in capital letters, anonymization in the text (sometimes required), clear indication of the clinical case or research.

Acceptance and Registration: Once accepted, the abstract will be included in the program (oral presentation) only if the presenting author registers for the conference.

NB Only 12 abstracts will be selected for oral presentation during the dedicated session. Oral communications should last 8 min (followed by 2 min of Q&A).
